Reflections of Life

Wallace W. Andrews, affectionately known as “Freddie,” was born on March 30, 1959, in Harlem, New York, to Vernell Allen and Luis Andrews.

Freddie had a deep love for family and cherished spending time with those closest to him. He especially enjoyed lively gatherings filled with laughter, card games, and dominoes. A passionate fan of wrestling, basketball, and football, Freddie also had a fondness for horror films and a deep appreciation for R&B and Motown music.

More than anything, Freddie found joy in helping others and creating lasting memories with family and friends. His generous heart and warm spirit touched the lives of many.

Freddie was a devoted son, brother, father, and friend. He is survived by his children and grandchildren, his sisters Carstella and Ann (affectionately known as Darkie), his brother Van, and his many loving nieces and nephews.

He will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved him. The bonds he built and the memories he leaves behind will forever be treasured. Freddie will always be remembered for his kindness, joyful presence, and unwavering love.

May he rest in peace.
